Jean LeGassick paints en plein air because “nature is the greatest teacher”. She prefers travel by truck and camper so she can camp right at the source of her inspiration, and often uses mule pack trains and hiking with art supplies carried on her back to remote campsites to immerse herself in the natural world. Her favorite places to paint are the rugged mountains, deserts, and coastlines of the West.

She graduated from Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, California, in 1979 with a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree. In addition to the Plein-Air Painters of America, she is a Signature Member of the California Art Club.

Her bibliography includes Enchanted Isle: the History of Plein Air Painting in Santa Catalina Island, and California Light: A Century of Landscapes (California Art Club). In addition she has had feature articles in national art magazines. Jean was also featured in the six part PBS series, “Plein Air: Painting the American Landscape”, shown on public television stations across the nation.
